DRAMATIC SCENE AS "PROPHET" OF ZION PASSES AWAY

"The Christian Scientists tell us there is no disease. Boo! They are not Christians. There is disease, and it is sent by the devil. I'm going to tell the truth in Boston for once, and the Christian Scientists had better take their medicine quietly. It's no use getting mad. Oh, you think the devil is dead in Boston, but there are a good many fatherless children just the same, if he is."—From speech of Dowie in Boston in 1901.

DOWIE DEAD ENEMIES REPENT

JOHN ALEXANDER DOWIE.
As the founder of Zion City appeared in the days of his greatest power.

"I Have Fought a Good Fight, I—," Last Words of Remarkable Man Who Founded a Religion and Built a City for Its Headquarters.

Special to the Boston American.

CHICAGO, March 9—John Alexander Dowie, founder of Zion City and self-styled Elijah II., died at 7:45 a. m. to-day at Shiloh House, Zion City, from a complication of diseases.

The death was lingering. The faithful prayed until the very end that he might yet be spared. He led them continually in their supplications until at last his feeble voice ceased, and he breathed his last.

About his bed stood several of the faithful and some of the men who have fought him with great vigor. These men repented at the death bed: they asked for forgiveness.

Even to the last breath the aged "Prophet" showed his indomitable will, his spirit of love for the struggle. His last word plainly indicated this feeling. He said:

"I have fought a good fight; I—"

His lips ceased moving. His eyes closed.

Spurned Doctor's Aid.

It became evident early last evening that Dowie's end was near. Some of his adherents asked him to have a doctor called in an effort to prolong his life.

"No, my dear friends. God is calling me to him. I am going to my reward. Call the faithful about me so that they may see the end."

His wish was fulfilled. Within a short time Shiloh House was filled with friends of the "Prophet."

"Let us pray to the end," commanded the doctor as these persons gathered about him.

Far into the night and even as the morning dawn broke over the lake the faithful remained in attitudes of supplication. They asked that the "Prophet" be spared to them for a time yet. At times hymns were sung.

Just as the first blush of morning cast its gleam into Dowie's room he came into consciousness from a state of coma which has seized him.

"The end is here," he said. His voice was very feeble.

"No, father, bear up. You have yet time to live," he was told.

"No, I go," the old man answered, with a shake of his gray head.

Wife and Son Deserted Him.

From that time until he died he continued to sink. Word was sent to Dr. Gladstone Dowie, the son, and his mother, and two men members of the family. In the hour of great struggle they had deserted him.

To the last Mr. Dowie did not ask for either of them. He had frequently had words with his son. There was no forgiveness. He died with a feeling of anger against them.

Dr. Dowie came to his end in the house from which he ruled the strangest city the world has ever known. He died there, a poor, broken old man, shorn of his power and influence, where once he stood the leader.

Dowie had been failing rapidly of late. A few weeks ago, realizing that his end was near, he asked that his wife and son be sent for, and to those nearest to him made full confession of the wrongs he has done to those with whom he has had dealings.

On the previous Sunday a number of the faithful ones who still believed in him gathered at Dowie's house to hear him preach. Before he was brought into the room all those present were commanded to kneel, so that they could get, at best, an indistinct view of the old man. Then the attendants brought Dowie in from an adjoining room and set him in a chair.

First one foot, then the other, was placed on a footstool; then his hands were lifted, one at a time, and placed on his knees. When he was thus settled the attendants placed a paper on his knees so that the kneeling faithful thought he was holding it. In this position the old man sat for a few minutes, mumbling unintelligable words that his devotees believed were inspired. Suddenly the apostle's head fell forward on his breast and he muttered:

"I am in great pain; carry me away."

Had a Spectacular Career.

John Alexander Dowie, "Elijah II.," as he styled himself, the founder and for years head of the Christian Catholic Church, has had one of the most remarkably spectacular careers of any man of this age. Born in Scotland, for years a rover, once a short-time convict in Tasmania, later a travelling preacher, finally a multi-millionaire through his church which he founded February 22, 1906, and last Summer deposed by the men he had elevated and declared to be mad, few

Thaw Counsel Are Confident of Victory; JEROME CORNERED

Prosecutor's Experts Fail Him: Unable to Pass on Defendant's Sanity.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, March 9.—That young Mrs. Thaw has been subpoenaed by the State in the trial of her husband was regarded to-day by counsel for the defence as evidence that the prosecution has found itself so thoroughly blocked that it has to catch at straws.

Neither Harry K. Thaw nor his counsel believe that District Attorney Jerome will gain any evidence valuable to the prosecution from his examination of Evelyn Thaw, and they were chuckling to-day over the fact that when the prosecutor question the young wife as his own witness he will be bound by her answers, and, under the rules of evidence, he will not be allowed to attack her.

Moreover, the fact that Mr. Jerome should have found it necessary to subpoena Evelyn was regarded by Thaw's lawyers as an admission of the failure to shake her story and of the lack of any strong rebuttal evidence.

Mrs. Caine Subpoenaed.

As for Stanford White's letters, the production of which in court was demanded by the subpoena duces tecum served upon Mrs. Thaw, it was said that the witness will state that they have passed out of her possession.

Lawyer Clifford W. Hartridge refused to produce the letters when called under a subpoena duces tecum.

The District Attorney will find in May McKenzie a hostile witness. She is to be called Monday morning. She is devoted to the Thaws, and the District Attorney will have difficulty in getting from her any statement unfavorable to Thaw's interest.

Mrs. Catherine Caine, who chaperoned Evelyn at her apartment in Ninety-fourth street after Evelyn and Thaw had been evicted from the Hotel Cumberland, and who has already been a witness for the defence, has also been subpoenaed by Mr. Jerome. It is not thought that he expects to bring out anything material from her, but merely wishes to have her available in the case of contradictions or inconsistencies of testimony.

Relies Upon Hartnett.

Charles Hartnett, Stanford White's private secretary, will also be a witness for the State. He knows about the trust funds established by White for Evelyn Nesbit and her mother, the other moneys advanced them and the cabled appeals sent to White by Thaw and signed by Evelyn to prevent his being apprehended while in Europe for abducting the girl. Hartnett knows a great deal about what his employer did for the girl and of her return to his influences even after her European trip with Thaw.

It was stated to-day that one of Jerome's keenest disappointments lies in the fact that his own insanity experts have failed him. It is said they have had such scant opportunity to study Thaw that they are unwilling to venture an opinion as to his sanity, past or present.

Jerome had hoped that the hypothetical question Delmas contemplated putting to his other experts, Doctors Hammond and Jeliffe, would bring out points on which his alienists could express a satisfactory opinion, either that Thaw was sane when he killed his enemy or is insane at present. It was the District Attorney's plan to put his own experts on the stand immediately to contradict the defence's alienists while their testimony was fresh in the jurors' minds.

PAPERS ARE SERVED ON EDDY DEFENDANTS

STARTLING DEVELOPMENTS COMING TO-DAY, SAYS COUNSEL PEABODY.

"Startling developments will occur to-day—I cannot say just when," said Attorney Frederick W. Peabody at the Parker House to-day, just before he was closeted in conference with former Senator Chandler and Attorney DeWitt Howe to discuss the latest phases of the Eddy suit.

"The papers have not yet been served on the four Boston defendants, but will be to-day. I can assure you that there will be something happen that will not only surprise Mrs. Eddy's advisers, but the public at large. That is all I care to say now."

Calvin Frye, Lewis Strang, Hermann eHring and Irving Tomlinson were served with official notice to-day at Concord, N. H., according to a dispatch to the BOSTON AMERICAN.

Frye and Strang were served in the reception hall of Mrs. Eddy's house at Pleasant View.

Sheriff Kimball went into the house to serve them at 9:50 a. m., and remained there only three minutes, time enough for Frye and Strang to come down stairs and receive the papers.

Tomlinson in Boston.

From Pleasant View the sheriff drove to the home of Irving Tomlinson on Warren street. Tomlinson was not at his home. The sheriff left the pacers at the house for him. Tomlinson, his sister told the sheriff, is in Boston.

Leaving the papers thus at his "last and usual place of abode" is recognized in New Hampshire as adequate service. Mrs. Eddy was not present at the serving of Frye and Strang at Pleasant View.

The sheriff said that the papers for the Boston defendant had been sent to Boston to-day and that service would be had there before nightfall.

Leaving Tomlinson's home the sheriff went to Herman Hering's h mose No. 91 North State street.

Hering met him at the door. The two men walked into the front room in Hering's house and there, in a room filled with pictures of Mrs. Eddy and copies of her books, Hering accepted service.

The notice that was served on the defendants to-day read as follows:

Copy of Notice Served.

The State of New Hampshire.

Merrimack, ss.—Superior Court.

The foregoing bill, having been filed in the office of the clerk of said court this 1st day of March, A. D. 1907.

It is ordered that said plaintiffs notify the said defendants to appear at the next term of said court, to be holden at Concord, in the said Conuty of Merrimack, on the first Tuesday of April next, and answer to said bill of complaint, by giving to each in hand, or leaving at the usual place of abode of each of them, a true and attested copy of said bill, and this order, at least fourteen days before said term.

It is further ordered that said defend-

LOW RECORDS SMASHED IN STOCK MARKET

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, March 9.—American Sugar and Steel led a sharp decline in the stock market at the opening to-day. Sugar broke to 121½, the lowest point it has touched in years. This is a net loss of four points over the close of last night. The decline was due to a suit for $30,000,000 filed against the company by a competitor that has been ruined.

Steel broke to 37, a new low record for this movement and a loss of one point over night. Union Pacific sold at 154⅝ for the first time since its dividend was increased. Other declines were: Pacific Coast three points to 97, Pennsylvania 2 to 133, Amalgamated Copper ¾ to 102, Reading ½ to 120, Missouri Pacific 2¼ to 69¾, for the first time in this century.

After the first half-hour a covering of the short contracts caused a rally of about two points in the most active issues.

WOMAN, GLADSTONE'S COUSIN, IN POORHOUSE

MONTPELIER, Vt., March 9.—Mrs. Eleanor Fletcher Bishop, or Countess Bishop Nicholas, mother of Washington Irving Bishop, the famous dead mind-reader, and who, in the Civil War, was called "the Florence Nightingale of America," has been taken to the poorhouse here. Her father was the late Sir James Davidson of Liverpool, Eng., a cousin of Gladstone.

JACK TROLLEY CAR TO FREE MAIMED WOMAN

HUNDREDS WITNESS REMOVAL OF VICTIM—IS TAKEN IN CAB TO HOSPITAL.

Several hundred people pushed and jammed about an in-bound Forest Hills car early to-day as it was jacked up to remove the maimed form of Dora Dexter, aged forty-five, of No. 60 Cliff street, Roxbury, who was struck by the car at the corner of Washington and Dudley streets. The woman was first hurled several yards ahead of the rapidly-moving trolley, in front of which she had tried to cross the street. She was then caught under the fender and badly cut and bruised on the face and body.

Inspector Kelley of the Boston Elevated railroad arrived on the scene, took charge of the raising of the car and had the injured woman removed in a cab to the New England Hospital on Dimock street.

Spectators say that the police were not notified of the accident for some time after and that no ambulance was sent for.

Her condition is said to be serious.

ARCHIE ROOSEVELT RALLIES IN HIS DESPERATE BATTLE FOR LIFE

Archie at Four Years.

PRES. AND MRS. ROOSEVELT AT SON'S BEDSIDE.

Archie's Latest Portrait.

Bulletin Says President's Son Passed Good Night. Unofficial Report of Relapse Caused Scare.

[BULLETIN.]

WASHINGTON, March 9, 8:45 a. m.—Secretary Loeb gave out from the White House the following statement:

"The physicians report that Archie Roosevelt had a good night. No unfavorable symptom and a general improvement since last report."

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Archie Roosevelt, who has been suffering with diphtheria for a week, continues to improve, according to Dr. Alexander Lambert, the physician in charge of his case. Dr. Lambert announced this morning that Archie had passed a very comfortable night and that the outlook was favorable in every way.

Much alarm was created this morning by an unofficial report that the patient had suffered a relapse and was in a most serious condition. The physicians' bulletin, however, given out later, did not confirm the reports circulated earlier in the day.

Early last night the report was made that Archie was resting easy and that the attending physicians were very hopeful of his recovery. Dr. Alexander Lambert, who was summoned from New York to take charge of the case, informed the President that while the patient's condition was encouraging he was not yet out of danger. Mr. Roosevelt was with his son for more than an hour early last night. In his visits to the sick room the President takes every precaution against infection.

6 DOCTORS HOLD CONSULTATION

Drs. Lambert, Surgeon-General Rixey and Assistant Surgeons R. H. Kennedy, W. C. Braisted and J. C. Prior of the navy, held a conference in the evening. At 10:30 Dr. Lambert gave out this bulletin:

"The patient is resting comfortably. No complication has developed since yesterday (Thursday), and his condition is as good as could be expected at this stage of the disease."

An earlier bulletin issued by Secretary Loeb also was of a reassuring nature.

Dr. Lambert will not leave Washington until he is satisfied that Archie is wholly out of danger.

Dr. Lambert pointed out to the President that diphtheria is a treacherous disease, and that Archie might at any time suffer a relapse.

Although the President was awake nearly all Thursday night, he looked none the worse for his long vigil, and last night he expressed a willingness to remain with Dr. Kennedy at Archie's bedside. Drs. Lambert and Rixey, however, urged the President to retire at his usual hour.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who has remained almost constantly at her son's bedside since the first day of his illness, also retired at an early hour.

PRESIDENT FIGHTS GERMS.

Precautions are taken by the President when visiting his son in the sickroom not to carry away with him any of the infection of diphtheria. Every time the President enters the sick room he takes off his coat and vest and puts on a long flowing gown which has been passed through a sterilizing process. These gowns were brought to the White House by the physicians when they first arrived to take charge of the case.

As soon as the President leaves Archie's room and before he quits the section of the house where the patient is isolated, he washes his hands in a solution of carbolic acid and resumes his outer garments. These precautions, the physicians have assured the President, make it impossible for any germs of diphtheria to be carried to the outside world.

ACCUSED "WITCH" IS PLACED UNDER BOND

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 9.—The strange accusation of exercising the craft of a witch was made against Mrs. Ida Mock by her neighbor, Mrs. Cecelia Balk, in Police Court yesterday. Mrs. Balk testified that when her father, who was nearly 100 years old, suffered a loss of appetite and refused to eat, it immediately occurred to her that he was bewitched by Mrs. Mock. Later the women met and a fierce quarrel ensued. The judge ordered Mrs. Mock to give a bond to keep the peace.

RAT BIT GIRL, FATHER SUES FOR $90,000

NEW YORK, March 9.—Charging that one of his daughters was bitten by a rat while she was in her berth and that the rest of the family were exposed to rude treatment from steamer officials and were given bad food, John Wurts, a professor in the Yale Law School, has sued the Compagnie Generale Trans-Atlantique for $90,000.

STEAL $100 FROM VT. MILK BOTTLES

BURLINGTON, Vt., March 9.—Wholesale thefts of money placed in milk bottles have baffled the police in this city for four weeks. To-day George McClellan is under arrest. He was detected as he was removing a milk bottle from a doorstep. While the amounts taken in each case were from three to twelve cents, the total is estimated to be nearly $100.

Pray for Archie's Recovery in Chicago Opera House

CHICAGO, March 8.—A prayer for the recovery of Archie Roosevelt was offered at the Episcopal Lenten service in the Chicago Opera House to-day. The service was conducted by the Rev. William A. Guerry, chaplain of the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn. The prayer was as follows:

"Almighty and most merciful Father, to whom alone belong the issues of life and death, look down from heaven, we humbly beseech Thee, with the eye of mercy, upon the sick child for whom our prayers are offered.

"Deliver him, O Lord, in Thy good appointed time, from his bodily pain and visit him with Thy salvation, so that if it should be Thy good pleasure to preserve his life he may serve Thee faithfully an do good in his generation; or else receive him into those heavenly habitations where the souls of those who sleep in the Lord Jesus enjoy perpetual rest and felicity.

"Grant this, O Lord, for the honor of Thine only Son, our Savior, Jesus Christ. Amen."

ENEMIES REPENT AT DEATHBED OF DOWIE

careers of men have been more checkered or have been filled with such contrasts.

Dowie came to America in 1888, when he landed in San Francisco with $100. He had just been released from prison in Tasmania. In 1890 he arrived in Chicago penniless, but he soon secured money and some followers through the preaching of his peculiar doctrines, which have since made him notorious all over the world.

Began "Zion" in 1902.

Three years after he established the Christian Catholic Church he began to buy land at Waukegan, Ill., and in 1902, Dowie began the erection of buildings in the "Zion" he declared he would build. In city and church he was supreme. He acquired 6,500 acres of land in his own title. In 1903 Zion was placed under the control of a receiver, but the courts removed the official after Dowie proved that he could pay all debts. Dowie claimed, then, to be worth $25,000,000.

During his spectacular career he preached his doctrines all over the world and was often mobbed. He led a great crusade in Milwaukee in the early part of 1903, and later in the same year he made his memorable pilgrimage at the head of his followers to New York, where great meetings were held in Madison Square Garden for many days and nights.

His New York crusade, which began on October 14, 1903, and ended on November 8, resulted in but seventy-five accessions to his faith, and Dowie left the city cursing it. This three weeks' crusade is estimated to have cost Zion $300,000.

Creditors Began to Press.

At this time creditors again began to press Dowie, and his palatial home at White Lake was attached. But he staved the evil day off, and as one of his vagaries he announced on December 8, 1903, that he was going to build a stone wall eighteen feet high and one and a half feet thick around Zion to protect it from the sin and the world.

The first day of 1904 he left Zion for another otur around the world, the former tour being made in 1900. Just before he left he told his followers that after his death he would return to the earth with the Saviour and reign until the destruction of the world.

He went to Australia, and on February 16 he was compelled to flee for his life from a mob that grew enraged at the way he assailed the ways of the people of that inland continent.

In June of the same year, 1904, Dowie lived for a time in little short of regal splendor at the Hotel Normandy in Paris. Arriving in London, he was ejected from the Hotel Cecil and was finally chased from London by a mob. Finding public enmity so bitter, Dowie hurriedly fled from England. He came to New York the same month, and after receiving but thirty-five cents in his collection boxes, which were passed around at a great meeting he held in Carnegie Hall, he returned to Zion declaring that New York was too wicked for him to live in.

In 1905 he planned to consolidate all of Zion's securities, including the stock in the famous lace mills, which he had built there at fabulous cost, and issue $7,000,000 seven per cent. gold bonds. A trip to New York followed his satisfying his creditors with $400,000 and later he started to Mexico. While on the way he was stricken with paralysis, and on February 8, 1906, he made Wilbur Glenn Voliva financial and executive head of Zion, which position he has practically held ever since.

On April 2 of last year Dowie was formally cast out of Zion for preaching and preparing to practice polygamy. This happened while Elijah II. was in Mexico, where he had gone for his health. He returned to fight the case in the courts, but lost when Judge Landis of Chicago declared Dowie did not own Zion, and John C. Hately was appointed receiver.

FORTY GIRLS IN PERIL AS BULLETS FLY

Forty girls employed by the New Can Company, on the third and fourth floors of the building at No. 326 A street, South Boston, were thrown into a panic to-day when two eighteen-year-old Italian employes, one of whom had just been discharged, fired three shots at Samuel Marzinski and his brother Charles, the owner and superintendent, respectively.

One bullet just missed the superintendent's head and buried itself in the woodwork of the stairway below the third floor, where the shooting occurred. Another crashed through a heavy plate window at the head of the stairs. The sound of the breaking glass mingled with the shrieks of the terrified women.

The two youths who attacked the officials are known as Joseph Reid and Rockey Simino. They yesterday engaged in a fist fight, it is said, in the works, and were stopped by the superintendent. Both were reprimanded, and to-day Simino was discharged.

As he left he attempted to pull Reid down the stairs, and demanded that he quit with him. As they argued on the stairs both were ordered out by the Messrs. Marzinski, whereat both drew pistols and fired. They then fled pell-mell down the stairs and escaped. Policemen from Station 6 are now hunting for them. They live on Charter street, it is thought.

It is said that several days ago Simino threw snowballs at a passing teamster, and as the latter whipped up, fired his pistol over his head.

IN REPLY TO BABY CONTEST QUESTIONS

Answers to Letters of Inquiry In Regard to Points Which Are in Doubt.

So many letters of inquiry have been received by the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN Baby Contest Editor that it is impossible to answer each individually.

The following answers to letters may help those in doubt on various points:

"ROXBURY"—Each week the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN prints the pictures of the five prize-winning babies for that week. Each of these receives a prize of $10 worth of photographs at one of Boston's best studios. The grand prize of $500 will be awarded to some baby selected from these prize winners as they appear from week to week.

"MOTHER"—All photographs sent through the mails must be prepaid at letter rate. This is imperative.

"Wollaston"—Of course Wollaston babies are eligible in this contest. It is not named in the list of towns because it is a part of Quincy, and Quincy includes Wollaston, just as it does Hough's Neck and Atlantic, or just as Boston includes Roxbury.

"Eager"—Because your baby was not included in last week's list of prize winners, it does not follow he may not be selected by the judges. The photographs are resubmitted. Although he may fail one week, he may win the next.

"Inquirer," Medford—No photographs will be returned until the end of the contest.

"Doubtful"—Your baby is not eligible if she was aver five years old. Only children of five years and under may win a prize.

61 TRUE BILLS BY GRAND JURY

Sixty-one "true bills" and sixteen "no bills" were reported by the Suffolk Grand Jury to-day.

Among the important "true bills" was that against Louis Tensh, who is charged with murderin ghis four-year-old son and shooting his wife on Janury 18. He afterwards tried to take his own life, but was unsuccessful. A bill was also found against Augustus H. Bernard, a State street broker, charged with the larceny of $7,000 worth of railroad bonds from Mrs. Jennie Briggs of Taunton.

Among the "no bills" was one in the case of Charles H. Bickford, who was charged with manslaughter in causing the death of Annie Smith at No. 8 Prospect street, West End, February 20. Bickford and Mr. and Mrs. Smith had been drinking heavily the night before, and in the morning the body of Mrs. Smith was found at the foot of the stairs with a bad gash in the back of her head.

JUDGE DISDAINS O'MEARA RULING

When Councilman Hugh Mealey of No. 208 I street was arraigned in the South Boston Court to-day, charged with violating the law by driving through A street with only one bell on the harness, his attorney, ex-Representative James F. Creed, ruled that the use of one bell was in compliance with the spirit of the law, though three are required.

Judge Fallon said that it was immaterial to him what Commissioner O'Meara held; that the defendant had by the evidence been shown to have violated the law.

The arrest was caused by Patrolman Daniel Lynch of Station 12. Attorney Creed argued that this was spite work, as it is said the two men have differed in the past.

The case was continued till next Saturday, on request of counsel.

CHARGED WITH AIDING SMUGGLER

THAW'S FATE HANGS ON JURY'S BELIEF IN EVELYN'S STORY

SO DECLARES DOROTHY DIX

Says That and Her Wedding Ring Are Arguments That Will Win for Prisoner.

EVIDENCE SUMMED UP

BY Dorothy Dix

Copyright, 1907, American-Journal-Examiner.

THE EXCUSE that Harry Thaw had to offer society for the breaking of the most inexorable of human laws is made. His justification for taking the life of a fellow creature, his plea for his own life, are now before the jury and, so far as his fate is concerned, for good or ill, the die is cast.

It has been the most extraordinary murder trial that this country has ever seen, conducted in the most extraordinary manner. Every turn of it has been spectacular. The defence began with a sensational hoop-la when, at the very opening, the little chorus-girl wife of the prisoner sprang into the witness chair with her dark story of a wronged youth; and it ended in a dramatic coup, with a pathetic spectacle of the proud old millionaire mother humbling herself for her son's sake.

Some criticism there has been of the legal presentation of the case, but no one will dispute the consumate skill with which the heart interest has been played up and the crime made to take on the moving aspect of the most appealing of all tragedies—the one inspired by the defence of the home. As a drama it has been admirably staged, admirably cast, even to the alienists, like a Greek chorus, chanting their perpetual refrain about "brain storms" in the background.

Prosecution Now Takes Stage to Startle.

Not to be outdone, the prosecution will, it is said, present equally startling evidence in rebuttal of what has been adduced by the defence and when the curtain goes up again it will be upon a scene quite as interesting and novel as any that has gone before. In the meantime, in the entr'acte, it is worth while to brush away all the theories and see what really has been done, and upon what grounds Thaw may base his hopes for mercy from his peers.

At the beginning, two things may be admitted. The first is that at no time has Harry Thaw been in actual danger of the electric chair. No man will ever be sent to his death for killing a man who preys upon young girls. That is a crime so monstrous and so unforgivable that the man who commits it puts himself beyond the pale of sympathy and the majority of folk look upon the one who rids the world of such a beast as having done a public service. In the trial of Harry Thaw, for slaying Stanford White, White's own record is Thaw's best defence.

The second thing is that Thaw's defence is a double-barrelled one—the "unwritten law" and insanity—so that if one misses fire the other one may hit. In other words, the "unwritten law" is offered to free him, but if it fails insanity is depended upon to save him from everything except the madhouse.

All Depends on Way Jury Regards Evelyn's Story.

The whole value of the unwritten law depends entirely upon the view that the jury takes of the truth of the story that Evelyn Nesbit told upon the witness stand. If they believe that she spoke the truth when she told of White having won her childish confidence under the guise of a benefactor and then of having taken advantage of that trust to decoy her to his den, then the moral law that gives every man the right to protect his home, and avenge the wrongs of the woman to whom he has given his name, will have just about as good a chance of being vindicated in New York as it had in Virginia the other day.

But whether the story was literally true or not, there was presented on the witness stand the picture of a mere girl, a child in looks, who had been dragged through the moral sewers of two continents. She had been thrown into sin when too young to understand what she did; she had had every aspiration of everything good uprooted and had had her beauty sold and traded in as if she had been a Circassian slave. That much spoke for itself, and it was something that went to every heart.

So too, did the fact that Harry Thaw, knowing what the girl was, knowing that he did not have to marry her to enjoy her society, did honorably marry her. That one act of unselfish love blotted out much of the score against him. The wife's story and the wedding ring upon her finger constitute the great sentimental arguments for Thaw.

Belief of Her Story Enough To Drive Any Man Mad.

In support of the theory that he was suffering from emotional insanity when he killed White, the proven facts are: First, the testimony of the Pittsburg physicians who told of his exceeding nervousness as a child and of an uncle and a cousin who were insane. One of them told of having treated him for St. Vitus' dance as a child and the other attended him through a spell of melancholia.

Then came the episode in Paris when he asked Evelyn Nesbit to marry him, and she refused him because of what she called the horror of White and which she told him. No one doubts that the story she told Thaw was practically the story she told upon the witness stand. The State contends that this tale is a tissue of lies, but Thaw believed it, and it was enough to drive any man mad, hearing it from the lips of the woman he loved.

Plenty of Evidence of Mental Instability.

The next proof of Thaw's disordered mind is his mother's testimony of his wild, strained, despairing look that struck her the instant she met him at the door to welcome him home from his trip to Europe. He seemed possessed with melancholia. He spent hours brooding over a secret sorrow that he would not tell her at first. He would break away suddenly from the table, or rush away from his guests, and play weird melodies on the piano that he would stop as abruptly as he had begun. At night he would sob aloud in his room, and when she crept in at 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning she would find him sitting up, sleepless. At last he confided in her, and told her the story that Evelyn had told him in Paris.

Unimpeachable witnesses of his mental instability are also furnished by his rambling [illegible] disjointed letters, and the will and codicil, made more than a year after the spell of melancholia his mother had testified to. In all of the written documents there is ample proof of the one idea that obsessed him—Stanford White. He believed that Stanford White was trying to get Evelyn back, that Stanford White had designs on his life, that other girls had been victims, that he must avenge their wrongs and punish White.

His wife's testimony adds weight to the growing evidence that his delusion was becoming acute. She said that even to see White on the street, to see him across a theatre, to merely hear his name, would throw her husband into a nervous state where he would become white and cold, and would bite his finger nails to the quick in a paroxysm of fury he could not control.

Then came the fatal night of the 25th of June. Thaw had been drinking some, but was not intoxicated. At Martin's where they dined, Mrs. Thaw had written her husband a note saying that White passed through the room. Afterward they went to the Madison Square Roof Garden, where Thaw, just as he was leaving, saw White again and killed him—walking calmly up to the doomed man and firing three shots into him and as calmly emptying his revolver, holding the pistol up to show that all danger was over, and thus averting what possibly might have been a panic, and then going quietly away with the policeman who arrested him.

Logic of Events Seem to Lead to Madhouse.

These are the facts before the jury on which they are to decide whether the killing of White was the act of a mad man, or of a jealous one, driven by hate to take the life of one whom he secretly feared. To my mind the logic of the defence is unanswerable. Thaw was insane when he killed White, just as he will be insane again under great stress of any emotion.

SEEK WOMAN KIDNAPPER IN HUNT FOR BOY

Police Believe That Mysterious Stranger Lured 4-Year-Old Horace Marvin Away.

HERMIT HELD AS SUSPECT

DOVER, Del., March 9.—For the first time since his disappearance Monday a tangible clue as to the probable kidnappers of four-year-old Horace N. Marvin, son of Dr. Marvin, has been obtained. John Hart, a mysterious character, is in jail at Newcastle, being held until he can give a satisfactory explanation of his actions on the day the lad was kidnapped.

Monday Hart is said to have been cruising about off the beach of the Marvin farm, and to have made a landing at a point near the old barn on the estate where the child is supposed to have been held immediately after the kidnapping.

Hart is unable to tell a straight story. He insists that he was alone on the sloop Monday. The testimony of a dozen reputable witnesses shows that there was at least one other man aboard the craft and that the sloop had in tow a small gasolene launch.

Woman at Bower's Beach.

It has been learned that recently two strangers at Bower's Beach had been paying regular visits to Hart. One of these persons was a well-dressed man, wearing a van dyke beard, and the other a very plain-looking woman, who is described as looking like a servant.

The police admit that they are seeking evidence to prove that this couple engaged Hart to make away with the Marvin child. In an effort to make Hart confess to a theory which they now hold, that the kidnapped child is being held by a woman in Philadelphia, the police will to-day submit their prisoner to a "third degree" examination.

The latest developments tend to show that the boy was probably kidnapped to be held for ransom. The theory that the lad might have been stolen as the result of trouble in Dr. Marvin's own family has been entirely dissipated.

Mr. Marvin's second wife, who was Miss Ruth Swith of Sioux City, Iowa, died recently. Since then her mother has lived with Dr. Garvin and looked after her grandchildren. An older son of Dr. Marvin by his first wife is to-day leading in the search for the kidnapped boy.

Police Have Ransom Letter.

Nothing could be learned to-day of the reported letter yesterday said to have been received by Dr. Marvin, demanding a ransom for his son. There is the best of reason, however, for believing that the communication is now in the hands of the police, who are seeking to trace it. To-day Attorney General Richards of Delaware, who is leading the officials in the search, wired the chiefs of police in New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and most of the larger cities of the East, asking them to look out for the child.

MRS. EDDY WELL, DECLARES MAYOR

Charles R. Corning, Mayor of Concord, last night told the BOSTON AMERICAN of his recent visit to Pleasant View. Mayor Corning has no affiliation with the Christian Science Church, but met Mrs. Eddy on matters of city business in company with General Streeter, her personal counsel. His statement follows:

By Charles R. Corning.

I KNOW Mary Baker G. Eddy personally. I have visited and talked to her and have seen her drive past my house for years. The same Mrs. Eddy who ten years ago passed in her carriage, and who I have seen bow to friends from her carriage window many times, conversed with me only a short time ago and delighted me with her knowledge of things. Yes, and with her flashes of wit.

We were hardly settled, Mrs. Eddy, General Streeter and I, when it was noticed that the seats had been so taken in the bay window that Mrs. Eddy was in a sort of cul de sac. One of us remarked: "Why, Mrs. Eddy, we seem to have you cornered." To which she made reply instantly: "That is something my enemies have been trying hard to do." They talk about somebody forging her signature. I have received many letters signed by her and one received within six months bore the same signature as others that have been in my keeping for four years.

MAYOR CORNING OF CONCORD.

Speaks from Knowledge.

Mind you, I am not arguing Mrs. Eddy's case; neither am I expressing opinions, and I am not a Christian Scientist. You ask me for facts and I shall just give you what I know; not what I think, hope, suspect or merely believe, but what I know.

That applies to the hand writing and to other things, and either they are solid truths or I am a plain liar. I'll take the decision. Neither am I a sentimentalist, but a hard-headed, plain man.

On our visit to Mrs. Eddy we talked for thirty minutes. She touched upon religion and the Christian Science Church and upon city matters.

You see she gave freely toward concreting certain streets, and these she frequently drives over.

Other subjects came up, one after an other, so varied and extraneous that you would suppose she would not have kept in touch with them. But she had, and her grasp of outside matters was accurate, swift and comprehensive to a surprising degree.

Mrs. Eddy is getting to be an aged woman. I had near relatives, of whom one lived to over eighty and another to over ninety, and I know what age and physical decline is. Mrs. Eddy is very able-bodied for her years.

"Is Brilliantly Sane."

The San Francisco disaster, I think, was one topic at one visit and that she knew all about. Mrs. Eddy, by the way, gave as I recall, some thousands for the relief of San Francisco. There is no question about her philanthropic nature.

As to municipal bonds, I don't know as Mrs. Eddy has $1,000 of them. They are not taxable, so would not appear on the assessor's books, if she had them. I know just about how all these bonds are placed. I can account for these bonds to the last $20,000, so she can't have over $20,000, and I have no reason to suppose she has any. When I saw Mrs. Eddy a short time ago, no man of sense would say she wasn't sane, and brilliantly so. I have no reason to believe that she has failed since then to any degree.

The next step in the proceedings will be the taking of the depositions of the witnesses for the plaintiffs. There will be a large number of these depositions.

To Cite Mrs. Eddy as Witness.

One of the witnesses upon whom notice to appear and give a deposition will be served is Mrs. Eddy. The time at which she will be served and the time at which other witnesses will be served will not be known until after the attorneys for the plaintiffs have had another conference.

Sheriff Kimball said:

I was graciously treated at each call. A maid let me in at Mrs. Eddy's home in response to the bell. I told her my name and purpose, and she ushered me into the parlor. In a few moments Mr. Frye and Mr. Strang appeared and bade me a cheery good morning. I told them I had come to serve the papers they had doubtless expected, and they smiled and suggested that it was entirely regular. Mr. Strang accompanied me to the door and let me out.

"I next drove to the home of Mr. Tomlinson and, being invited inside, learned that Mr. Tomlinson had gone to Boston. His sister, Miss Tomlinson, said she would give him the paper, and I left and drove to the home of Mr. Hering on North State street. Mr. Hering and I are old acquaintances. We chatter about the bright, crisp morning. I passed him the papers, and my work was done."

POSTAL HEADS FALL IN BIG STAMP FRAUDS

Recent 'Resignation' of Third Postmaster-General Was Demanded.

CHARGES FILED BY CLERK

WASHINGTON, March 9.—As a result of the New York American's exposure of rottenness in the Postoffice Department, a shake-up is pending.

On the very highest authority it is to-day declared that the resignation which Third Assistant Postmaster-General Edwin C. Madden recently handed to former Postmaster-General Cortelyou was not a voluntary tender, but was demanded because of revelations of rottenness in his department.

On the same authority the prediction is made that Major James H. Reeve, superintendent of postage supplies and postmasters' accounts, will be asked to follow Madden's example before many weeks, and that other men holding important posts under the newly appointed Postmaster-General, George von L. Meyer, will either be allowed to resign or dismissed and criminally prosecuted.

Clerk Makes Charges.

The Madden retirement, the promised downfall of Major Reeve and the revealing of bad conduct on the part of other men in the postal service are all directly traceable to the efforts of an unfortunate man named Thomas Jones, who, when a humble clerk in the department, refused to "turn blind" while laws and rules were being violated and who made strong charges against Madden, Reeve and others. Valiantly Jones fought the powerful cliques arrayed against him until driven from the department himself, but his full victory appears to be now in sight.

Jones, in his formal charges, which were first filed with Postmaster-General Robert J. Wynne, now Consul-General to London, and later Postmaster-General Cortelyou, accused Madden, Reeve, W. C. Fitch and others of various violations of United States laws and of postoffice regulations. The specifications embraced conspiracy to defraud the government, making false expense returns, aiding in the violation of levying political assessments and other matters.

Mulcted Collectors.

He specifically charged one unique method of grafting by mulcting stamp collectors of huge sums of money by providing unlimited supplies of "rare stamps," which because of their scarcity commanded large premiums.

200,000 "TRIBUNES" MONDAY

I have given orders that 200,000 copies of my newspaper, the "Boston Daily Tribune," be printed to cover the demand which I know will be created for the edition of Monday.

In the "Boston Daily Tribune" of Monday I shall take the public completely into my confidence and talk about matters in a plain, unvarnished manner, which heretofore I have refrained from putting into cold type or even repeating to my best friends.

I believe every copy of the "Boston Daily Tribune" of Monday will be worth the full price of a year's subscription to any reader, and I hope everybody interested in fair play—in truth—and opposed to falsehood and deception—will buy the "Tribune" Monday, and read all I have to say along these lines.

The price of a single copy of the "Boston Daily Tribune" is 3 cents. The regular subscription price is 75 cents per month, or $8 per year.

The "Boston Daily Tribune" is a financial newspaper, and although less than three months old has printed more real financial news than has been printed in all the other alleged financial newspapers of Boston and New York in a year.

And it will continue to print the news!

"KNOW the eyes and you know the face," is an old, familiar saying. It sounds well, but is it true? Here is a chance to make the test.

THE NAMES OF THESE SEVEN THEATRICAL STARS WILL BE PUBLISHED IN TO-MORROW'S BOSTON AMERICAN. SEE IF YOU ARE CLEVER ENOUGH TO IDENTIFY THEM

COSTLY JEWELLED BUTTONS

THE jewelled buttons which are now being used are costly in the extreme, and are not now sold by the dozen or half dozen.

Some of these buttons are mounted in delicately wrought gold or silver and set with precious stones, and they are now often made to order from specially drawn designs. Aquamarines, amethysts, garnets and turquoise matrix are favorites for elaborate buttons, while the different colorings of sapphires are used by a few who order regardless of price. Coral and malachite also lend themselves to such uses.

Such buttons are never sewn on a garment, but fastened in with a gold button ring, a screw, or a tiny gold safety pin, so that the change to another garment is the matter of but a moment.

Nothing harmonizes so well with the fashionable Bordeaux shades as the amethyst, and for this reason there is a great demand for this stone.

Malachite, set in antique silver, makes an ideal button for blue and green; while the turquoise matrix is adaptable for all sorts of blues and grays.

CLEANING A TIGERSKIN RUG

PROCURE some whiting and make it damp, but not wet. Rub this well into the fur so that it goes down to the actual skin. Leave it till next day, when the whiting, now dry, should be well rubbed, then removed by shaking and brushing with an ordinary clothes brush. The skin should be placed over the back of a chair, and well brushed along the parting thus made, blowing away the dust and whiting at the same time. To brighten up the colors, gasoline should be applied by means of a clothes brush, which should be passed lightly in the way of the fur, not against it.

EXERCISE IS BEAUTY'S SECRET

An Erect Carriage May Be Easily Acquired

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A GOOD carriage is absolutely necessary to style and good looks.

If you stand with bent shoulders and chin poked forward all the glad raiment in the world will not make of you a smart, stylish-looking woman.

You must stand straight if you want to present a good appearance. You must hold your head up and your chin in, and your back straight.

It is natural to some people to stand erect, to others it comes very hard.

There are a few simple exercises which take but little time, and yet will help you wonderfully if you have the patience to try them night and morning. It only means getting up five minutes earlier in the morning.

I know one woman who has developed her chest two inches by an extremely simple exercise.

She lets her hands drop to her sides and then raises them slowly until they meet palm to palm above her head, then brings them slowly to her side again. She breathes in as she raises them and out as she lowers them. She does this ten times night and morning.

Another splendid exercise for reducing the hips is to raise the arms high above the head and then bring them slowly down till the finger tips touch the floor in front of you without bending the knees.

This must be done twenty-five times night and morning, and you must not be discouraged if it takes some time before the effect is shown.

If you feel drowsy and very loath to get up in the morning it is because the brain after the long night's rest is laden with somewhat impure blood and the lymph vessels which remove waste matter are overful and sluggish. The following exercise will help to arouse your sleepy brain:

Place the finger tips against the neck just under the ear and move swiftly down to the front of the shoulder, along the course of the jugular vein, drawing the used-up blood away and leaving room for a fresh supply.

This should be done twice at each side of the neck. Then the hands should be placed on the back of the neck just under the skull and moved downward as far as possible. This clears out the lymph vessels and effectually prevents swollen glands, from which so many people suffer.

After two brisk rubs of the lymph vessels return to the jugular veins and then back to the glands, half a dozen or eight times, until the operation will be found far better than a cup of coffee; and whenever the brain is dull through congestion this massage will be equally effective.

How to Win Bright Eyes and Rosy Cheeks

Sleep with as flat a pillow as you comfortably can. High pillows are a great encouragement to round shoulders.

You know it is not clothes alone that make a woman look smart; it is the way she puts her clothes on and the way she holds herself.

You might be dressed by Pacquin, Doucet or Worth, but if you held yourself badly you would not have a particle of style.

Think this over and see if it is not worth while to devote a few minutes twice a day to improve your figure.

At the same time these exercises will give you bright eyes and rosy cheeks.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

A LITTLE GIRL'S DUTY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of fifteen, and have just begun the high school course, the term beginning February. My mother, who is a very weak woman and has a family to attend to, wishes very much that I should stay at home and help her with the housework. I love high school very much, and this is my only opportunity to get a good education, but as I am needed at home I do not know whether I should keep on going to school or not. I would be very grateful for your kind advice. J. S.

MY dear, it certainly is very hard to give up school when you enjoy it so much. But for a little while, anyway, I think you should help your mother. You say your mother is not strong, and that she has a family to look after. You must help her or she will break down altogether, and then you would indeed be badly off. After a while, perhaps, you will be able to go back to school.

AN UNCERTAIN LADY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a very nice girl, whom I have known for some years. She is about my age. I wrote her a letter asking her to correspond with me. She wrote back, saying "she was keeping company with another young man." She said, "Don't be discouraged; there are chances yet."

Do you think I should answer her last letter, or what should I do? HOPEFUL.

I WOULD not pin my faith very strongly to that young woman if I were you. She does not want to give up the other man, and yet she wants to keep you on the string also. She is too uncertain a quantity to be relied on.

SHYNESS, PERHAPS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have a gentleman friend whom I care for very much. One fault I have to find with him is that when I am speaking to him he can't look me in the face, and when I am not looking at him I know he stares at me. But as soon as I turn to him he will immediately drop his eyes. My mother says that he is deceitful on account of that habit.

Now, my dear Miss Fairfax, will you please tell me if that is a mark of deceit? Is it not proper to look at the person whom you are speaking to? MADELINE C.

IT is possible that your friend is shy, and for that reason finds it hard to look at the person to whom he is talking. I know that it is considered a sign of deceitfulness when a person fails to look you straight in the face, but there are cases where it is merely the effect of shyness.

Love Superstitions About Moonlight

THERE appears to be something marvelous in moonlight, which acts upon the tender hearts of young men and girls and renders them unusually susceptible to the wiles of the delightful god of love; and many are the quaint customs and curious superstitions which show how strong is the belief that the moon and Cupid have entered into copartnership for the undoing of men and girls.

The new moon, especially the first new moon of the new year, is the best beloved by lovers, and is supposed to have remarkable powers of divination in all things relating to the future doings of Cupid. In certain parts of Europe it is the custom of maidens, on the first appearance of a new moon, to go outdoors, and, looking up at the moon, say the following rhyme:

"New moon, new moon, I hail thee!
By all the virtue in thee,
Grant this night that I may see
He who my true love will be."

Having said this, the girls go to bed, feeling assured that before morning they will see their future husbands in their dreams. If a girl wishes to know how many years it will be before she will marry, she is advised to look at the first new moon of the new year through a silk handkerchief that has never been washed, repeating the following:

"New moon, new moon, I hail thee!
New moon, new moon, be kind to me!
If I marry man, or man marry me,
Show me how many moons it shall be."

The number of moons the girl sees through the handkerchief—the threads multiply the vision—tell her how many years it shall be before she will marry.

Another method is to look at the first new moon of the new year in a mirror. The number of moons seen in the glass tell the number of years before marriage.

A bachelor has the right to claim a kiss and a pair of gloves as a reward from the first girl that he meets while walking under the new moon, providing he announces the new moon first.

If the first love kiss is given and the first love vows are spoken under the light of the new moon, it is said that Cupid will see that the love thus plighted shall never be blighted.

CHAPTER LIII.

Nurse Mason

SYLVIA stopped mechanically and took up the crumpled newspaper from the floor. She folded it neatly and placed it on the top of the bundle from which Mueller had taken it a few minutes before.

"These were Raymond's papers. I do not wish to destroy any of them. I wish to leave them always in this room, exactly as he arranged them when—when he was here."

She did not seem to have paid any particular attention to Mueller's evident agitation at sight of that marked report in the newspaper. Her thoughts were so full of the all engrossing subject that occupied them so unceasingly of late that she had no room in her mind for any less important matter.

Dr. Mueller hesitated for a moment, then said hastily:

"The truth of it is, Sylvia, that 'Dr. Newell,' who was so very unpleasantly mixed up in that ugly business at the Black Horse Inn some years ago, is a very old friend and distant relation of mine, and I naturally resented the vile suspicions to which he was subjected at the time of that girl's death.

"When the memory of that case is renewed I can hardly control my temper. I heard you once—on that afternoon last month when you and Miss Peard came to The Hollow—express your opinion that Newell was guilty. Your words stung me, Sylvia—although, of course, you could have no idea at the time that this man was one of my friends."

"None, indeed, Carl, and surely you will admit that the evidence seemed to suggest his guilt—from an outsider's point of view, at least?"

"Yes, that is just it—from an outsiders' point of view. But an outsider never can form a just opinion on such a matter. It is necessary to be in the court during the trial—to follow every word of the evidence pro and con, to study the faces of witnesses and others—in order to arrive at a just, unprejudiced decision. Had you seen Frank Newell, Sylvia, you would no longer accuse him of that cowardly crime."

Stirring a Heart

"I am sorry I did not know he was a friend of yours, Carl. Let us forget the little incident. It is all past and gone now, and there can be no reason for reviving it. But Raymond knew and liked that wretched girl—Pattie Pollard—and that was why he was so interested in the tragedy, and why, no doubt, he kept the reports of the newspaper in this bundle."

"Don't talk any more about it, dearest," Mueller said, as he drew one of Sylvia's hands in upon his arm and lifted her fingers to his lips. "I shall miss you cruelly—cruelly—when you leave Moorcombe. The thought of the long Winter without you is like a nightmare to me, dearest. I do not believe I can resist the temptation of paying you a flying visit to Florida soon."

"You must find me a gloomy companion of late, Carl—and if I were to remain here I should go mad! Perhaps the change of scene may be of some benefit to me—physically; but no change can undo what has been done.

"Were I to live for a thousand years I should carry to the hour of my death the burden of this sorrow of my life. I can never be again as I was—never. But, of course, I shall be glad to see you any time you think of coming."

A little chill stole through Mueller's veins as he heard these words. What a very secondary place he occupied in this girl's heart and existence! Even now—even now—the very memory of her loved, lost brother was more to her—far more to her—than his own actual presence!

"Do come out of this gloomy room, Sylvia, dearest!" Mueller said, a moment or two later. "There is a delightful fire in the drawing-room, and I want to have a confidential talk with you before I go. I wish to get back to The Hollow at six to see Nurse Mason. I've ordered an automobile to meet her at Cleveland, and she is to dine at The Hollow and to come here later to-night.

Disappointing

Sylvia somewhat listlessly accompanied Mueller to the drawing-room; but the "confidential talk" was a disappointing one. Sylvia was abstracted and silent. Mueller eager and nervous at first, then chilled, constrained and almost reproachful.

"I think I had better go, Sylvia. I am evidently wearying you," he said at last, as he rose to take his leave. "It is unfair to blame you in any way—for anything. But I pray God the time may come when I shall feel that I am of some importance in your life. Day and night I hunger and thirst for that hour."

The intensity of the words and of the tones that accompanied them stirred up within the girl's numbed heart a vague sense of self-reproach. She also rose, and, obeying an impulse of remorseful kindness, caught his face between her hands and swiftly touched his forehead with her lips.

"Perhaps the hour may come, Carl. These things are brought about very often when we least expect them, and are all the more welcome on that account. But, in the meantime, you must never think for a moment that I am ungrateful for your love—that I fail to appreciate it and to thank you in my heart for it! Now, good-by for the present. I am unstrung this evening. I daresay my visit to that memory-haunted room has upset me."

Mueller left and slowly approached the old mansion in its sheltered hollow; but as he came closer to the avenue he heard the sound of a vehicle just leaving the front door, and the fact was borne to him that Nurse Mason had arrived, and his gloomy musings were instantly banished. He quickened his steps and in a few minutes had reached the house.

The front door was open and a tall, strong-featured woman of forty, or thereabouts, dressed in a gray uniform, was giving directions to the butler as to her baggage.

"Oh, Nurse Mason, is this you?" Mueller said, with a careless nod, as he entered the hall. "Kindly follow me to the drawing room. I have a few things to say to you before you dine."

The tall woman started a little, and a dark flush suffused her swarthy face. For a moment or two her eyes glittered, and she bit her thick under lip, as if in anger, but whatever this feeling may have been, it quickly passed, and, with a murmured acknowledgment of his greeting, she followed him to the drawing room.

Not until he had closed the dor behind her imposing figure did Mueller utter another word. Then he smiled, extended his hand and looked full and somewhat apologetically into the woman's face.

Dangerous

"Well, Rebecca, and how have you been ever since? For my own reasons I thought it better to act as I did in the hall just now. Servants are curious and observant in these out-of-the-way places, and it is just as well to give them as little food for speculation as may be!"

An angry retort seemed to tremble on Nurse Mason's tongue, then she resumed her self-control.

"I have been very well," she said.

"And the child?"

The woman's face softened.

"Which one do you mean?" she asked.

Dr. Mueller was shrewd enough to play the right card. "Yours—ours—of course."

"Well, too, and happy and hearty."

"And that brat of Bracebridge?" Mueller remarked nonchalantly, although he awaited her answer keenly.

"It's a sickly thing," returned Nurse Mason. "I have left it three miles north of here at a farm house, the mistress of which I knew long ago, when I needed the help of a woman—you ought to remember full well. The child will be safe enough while I am here."

"You probably will be here a long time," remarked Mueller, carefully watching the nurse's face, "unless——"

"No more of your unlesses, Carl," brusquely replied the woman. "I won't have them. After that little affair of Bracebridge's wife I don't want any more of those unless cases in mine. Watch over this creature, I will keep her from waking up if I can, as that seems to be what you want, but no more slow poison for mine."

"Hush, Rebecca, for God's sake!" cried Mueller. "Do you want to hang us both?"

"Sometimes I don't care what becomes of us both," returned the woman defiantly, as she turned and walked rapidly from the room.

"Rebecca is getting dangerous," mused Mueller as he looked darkly after her. "I must attend to her case after she has helped me through this hole of Ruth Pritchard's possible recovery."

He stopped, thought a moment and then uttered these fateful words:

"Ruth Pritchard must not recover."

TRY THIS FOR CATARRH.

This harmless Vegetable Prescription, while simple, inexpensive and easily prepared at home, is said to readily relieve Catarrh, and if taken a few doses occasionally, will prevent an attack during the entire season. Try it, anyway.

FUNNY, BUT GOT THE COLUMBIA HOOK

The pleasantries of an amateur monologist who ventured on the stage at the Columbia last night were the most sorrowful yet and the hook workers quickly gathered him in. His efforts, however, kept the big audience in a state of merriment that excelled the work of the professional comedians in the burlesque show. First prize went to Archie Vincent, contortionist, while the Stone brothers, dancers, were rewarded with second money.

Noted Beauty Seeks New Divorce from Millionaire

Mrs. Elmer B. Thomas of Peabody Charges Cruel Treatment; Seeks Custody of Children.

Mrs. Elmer B. Thomas of Peabody, one of the most noted beauties of the North Shore, had filed suit for divorce against her millionaire husband, this being the second suit of its kind in the life of the couple since their marriage about ten years ago.

Cruel and abusive treatment was the reason stated in the libel. Mrs. Thomas asks for the custody of her two children, and it is rumored that a sharp contest will be fought in the courts over them.

In January of 1906 came the news that Mr. and Mrs. Thomas, together with Mr. and Mrs. Philip Symonds, boon friends and companions had separated. Then followed the filing of the first suit, of Mrs. Thomas for divorce.

The two women left for Mrs. Thomas' Summer home in Ponemah, N. H., where they barricaded themselves against gossippers.

Upon their departure from Peabody Mr. Thomas accompanied his wife to the train and bade her a polite goodbye. Mrs. Thomas took one child while her husband took the other.

Early in May of the same year friends of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas learned that because of the love of their children the parents had been reunited.

The couple went to Europe, where they remained a short time, and on their return journeyed to their home in New Hampshire, where society thought them happy and contented.

A few weeks ago came another quarrel, which culminated in the filing of the suit by Mrs. Thomas.

Friends of Mrs. Thomas who have been asked the cause of the action, say that she has Socialistic notions. Mr. Thomas declines to discuss the suit in any way.

Mr. Thomas is now president of the Southwick Leather Company and is also interested in the wool business built up by his grandfather, the late J. B. Thomas, one of the richest men in Essex County. Upon the latter's death young Thomas became the legatee of an estate valued at $1,000,000.

Wife Limited His Shaves To Two a Week; Left Her

Dorchester Man's Excuse for Deserting His Better Half—Too Much Nagging, Too.

Two shaves a week at ten cents each, ten cents a day for our car fare, thirty-five cents a day for lunch and one cent for newspaper, is the allowance that Henry B. Caldwell of Dorchester, asserts his wife, Charlotte Caldwell, of No. 14 Waldo street, Somerville, made him, and he frankly admitted to Judge McIntyre yesterday in the Probate Court, East Cambridge, that he believed it was good and sufficient reasons for deserting his wife two years ago and refusing to contribute toward her support, and that of their fifteen-year-old girl.

Economists who devote a great deal of time exploiting "how to live on $1.50 per per week and be happy" will record Mrs. Caldwell as a remarkable financier, but her husband strenuously objected to what he termed "her unbearable financiering." These facts were brought out in a suit for separate maintenance brought by Mrs. Caldwell against her husband, which began yesterday afternoon and will be again heard on Monday.

The Caldwells were married in South Boston in 1889. In September, 1905, Caldwell quit his wife's home in Somerville and went to live with his mother in Dorchester. In her declaration, Mrs. Caldwell charges desertion and non-support.

"After my provision business failed I went to work for $8 per week and sometimes got as much as $10," testified the husband. Every Saturday I gave my wife my pay envelope without opening it. Every time I came home she was nagging me about financial affairs."

After the witness had given an itemized account of the expenditure of his weekly income of $2.96 his attorney queried: "How did you manage to get money for your tobacco?"

"I had to economize on my lunches, and and the money I saved in that way went for tobacco," replied the husband.

Mrs. Caldwell testified that her husband had deserted her and her girl, who was then thirteen years of age, in September, 1905." I have only seen him twice since then and for an hour only each time, when he called at my house on Waldo street."

During her cross-examination Mrs. Caldwell said that the house at No. 14 Waldo street, where she keeps boarders, was deeded to her by her husband just prior to the time he went into insolvency, while conducting a provision business at No. 58 North street.

GIVE NOVELLI 12 CURTAIN CALLS

At the Majestic Theatre last evening before an enthusiastic audience, Ermete Novelli, the eminent Italian actor, appeared for the first time here as Corrado in "The Outlaw," a drama by Paolo Giacometti. The role is entirely different from any he has assumed here yet, never lacking in the effectiveness and natural elements of the character.

That Novelli has won the approval of the American public in his wonderful interpretation of both comedy and tragedy was evidenced last evening by no less than a dozen curtain calls, which necessitated a speech, and so vociferous was the audience that he was obliged to assure them that if they remained seated until after the performance he would endeavor to entertain them with a short monologue, which he did in a most graceful and skillful rendition.

'ARREST' TRAIN FOR BEING LATE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

HOUSTON, Tex., March 9.—The California flyer, No. 7, on the Southern Pacific road, was prevented by the State authorities from continuing its journey westward yesterday. This was done under a recently passed law under which Texas claims the right to order the discontinuance of any train that is more than thirty minutes late. The train was fifty minutes behind time.

The flyer had about 200 passengers on board, among them a number of prominent men from New York and Boston. The discontinuance of the train caused a delay of thirteen hours to all passengers and a good deal of grumbling. A committee was formed to protest against the enforced delay, and it is probable that a test case will be made.

Two eighteen-year-old boys, Joseph Reid and Rockey Simino, both armed with pistols, to-day fired three shots at both the owner and superintendent of the New Can Company, at No. 326 A street, South Boston, all shots going wild, then ran down the stairs of the plant and escaped. One shot just missed the head of Charles Marzynski, the superintendent, and his brother Samuel, the owner, also had a narrow escape.

The superintendent had discharged young Simino and reprimanded Reid, because of a violent quarrel in the works. Simino called out Reid and renewed the altercation on the stairs. When the officials interfered both lads drew guns and began shooting.

The youths, who live on Charter street, are now hunted by the police.

DISPLAY AT BOSTON'S GREAT AUTO SHOW WHICH OPENS TONIGHT

AUTO TO BE MADE KING TO-NIGHT

By J. C. Kerrison.

WHEN the doors of Mechanics and Horticultural Halls are thrown open to the public this evening, they will be found to contain one of the finest staged collections of high grade motor vehicles and power boats that has ever been gotten together under any one roof at any one and the same time.

It will prove an exhibition, the like of which has not been seen heretofore, one making ahead of even New York, Chicago, the famous French salon or the world-famed Crystal Palace exposition. The collection comprises the best efforts of the motor builders of the civilized world; the finest products of the mechanical geniuses, and the greatest advancement in mechanical propulsion.

The excellence of the cars is such as causes the thinking individual to pause and wonder at the vast sums of money invested in this great and growing industry, and then endeavor to peer into the future and imagine, if possible, what greater latitudes will be recorded before the end is nigh. With the advancement of motor vehicles for pleasure purposes, the commercial value of the cars are coming into sight, beyond that—

Was a Busy Day.

But why go into details before the show opens. These pleasures and lessons will all be spread before the eyes of the public on this, the opening night, and the results will speak for themselves.

Yesterday was indeed a busy day for those in any way connected with the exhibit. There was work for every one and so expeditiously was it carried out that before the shadows had begun to lengthen, the show was virtually half staged, and everything gave promise of the show being more complete this evening than it was on the opening night a year ago. True it was that several of the exhibits have been delayed en route, but so far as can be seen or learned there will be decidedly few exhibitors who will fail to appear in their best bib and tucker, or who fail to make an impressive showing with their goods this evening.

Every entrance to the hall was utilized for the receiving of goods. Drays carrying costly and luxuriant motor vehicles were backed up to the sidewalk and yeoman service was done in getting the wonders of the century under cover, where they shall for the next week or so grace the hall and attract the multitudes whose every thought these days is directed towards the automobile of the gasoline explosion, steam or electric variety. There will be one or two surprises this evening, but not a single one of them will be along drastic lines.

System Everywhere.

If one entered the hall at any time yesterday he would have found himself more or less at sea. Everyone was moving around with speed and seeming indifference, and it looked like confusion worse confounded. It was a system, nevertheless; a system which produced the perfect whole that will be witnessed this evening. Here was a man tacking down a piece of carpeting; there was another erecting a aril dividing one exhibit from another; there a crew of men pushing a seemingly lifeless four-wheeled monster; while still further down the hall an artist was changing a lifeless tree into one full of apple blossoms and another of roses. Every man had something to do. There was no time for idlers; none were tolerated.

There was a great influx of visitors from other cities yesterday. Almost every manufacturing firm of any consequence had sent its personal representative to be present at the opening; not that the local men are not capable of taking care of all that may be required, but rather from the fact that previous experience has demonstrated that the home office cannot afford to permit the Boston automobile exhibit to pass without having its personal representative present to see what is going on; to be seen and to see, which two latter are most valuable in the automobile industry. This show is admittedly the greatest retail automobile show of the country.

And this year will prove no exception to the rule.

HARRIGAN LOST IN THE SEVENTH

Special to the Boston American.

LEWISTON, Me., March 9.—Kid Dufresne of Lewiston won from Eddie Harrigan of Portland at City Hall in the seventh round of what was to have been a twelve-round bout to a decison, for the championship of Maine, the men weighing in at 118 pounds. The fighting was fast throughout, and in the first two rounds Harrigan had the best of it. In the third round Dufresne recovered himself, and in the last four rounds punished Harrigan severely. Harrigan was somewhat groggy at the beginning of the seventh round, and after nearly two minutes of fighting his seconds threw up the sponge to save him from a knockout.

COMMISSIONER SOLD FOR $2500

Commissioner, a very handsome dark bay three-year-old stallion of good size and conformation, and a perfectly-gaited trotter, has been sold by Benjamin Pope, of Boston, to E. C. Hunter, Pittsfield, Me., for $2,500.

The noted stallion Bingen, 2:06¼, sired Commissioner, while his dam is Lady Hazel, by Solicitor, son of Belmont, that was out of the famous brood-mare Blandina. The second dam of Commissioner was Hazel, by Alcyone, 2:27. He was bred by Mr. Pope at his select Stonymeade farm in Concord, Mass.

At the Boston Horse Show last Spring Mr. Pope exhibited the then two-year-old against the best in the country, and successfully carried off the blue ribbon over all which paraded the tan-bark arena. Mr. Hunter intends having Commissioner worked easily to develop his speed till a five-year-old, when he will be campaigned for a fast trotting record.

MAINE WILL LIMIT BOXERS TO 6 ROUNDS

AUGUSTA, Me., March 9.—In the Senate yesterday the bill limiting boxing contests to six rounds and providing that there shall not be more than five pounds difference in the weight of the contestants and that no decision shall be given was finally passed.

JIMMY BARRETT WILL PROBABLY COVER RIGHT AND STAHL CENTRE FIELD

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.

A. H. C. Mitchell,
Baseball Specialist for the Boston American.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 9.—Sullivan and Shaw, the latest arrivals, are the ones complaining of soreness to-day. The other players got a start on them and to make up for lost time Shaw and Sullivan worked like beavers the first two days. Now they can hardly get out of bed. Collins is wisely taking things easy and is not breaking his arm with swift throws.

Both Shaw and Sullivan have created a most favorable impression on the critics. Shaw handles himself like a veteran and there seems to be no trick of the big mitt that he is not familiar with. Sullivan bears a close resemblance to McGraw when the latter was thin and wiry. Sullivan is slightly taller than Muggsy, but has the same quick movements that characterized McGraw when he was at his best. Sullivan is marvelously quick on his feet and can outrun any man on the team, with the possible exception of Glaze. He bunts cleverly and ought to be good at purloining bases.

The outfield will be unquestionably much speedier than it has ever been, with two such fast men as Sullivan and Barrett on the team. Stahl announced early in the year that he would put Barrett in center and go to right field himself, but he has evidently changed his mind, for he has not relinquished the center garden in practice so far. Doubtless he feels more at home there and he knows Barrett can take care of the right field as well as he could.

Secretary McBreen wired President Taylor yesterday that Pitcher George, the Lacrosse, Wis., man, had asked for transportation from Columbus, O. Mr. Taylor replied to forward transportation at once, so we will soon see the the man who was recommended to the club by Killilea of Milwaukee, the former owner of the Bostons.

Stahl Gives Every Man Chance to Work.

The team has not settled down to steady practice. Stahl's system of training is well planned and gives every man a chance to get all the work necessary. There is at first ten minutes of tossing the ball. Then the regular team takes the field, while one of the young pitchers goes into the box. Then Uncle Cy or Tannehill bats to the outfield, while another man bats grounders to the infield. The pitcher serves to the batters as fast as they come up, each man taking a full swing and a bunt at the ball. Thus all hands are working at the same time. Finally the fielders come in for batting practice, while the pitchers and substitutes take the field. There is an hour and a half of work twice a day.

Uncle Cy came out of his injury nicely and to-day feels no effects from the terrific rap Barrett gave him on his pitching elbow. The old fellow is going along nicely, but says he does not feel so playful in the afternoon as he does in the morning. He says he really needs six weeks of slow work to get himself right.

Stahl will not hurry him at all, but make the young pitchers do most of the early work. Most of the boys have now worked out of their soreness and from now on the practice will grow livelier, though it has so far been as lively as one could wish for. There have been no serious injuries, though Shaw had a toe nail nearly torn off yesterday.

Stahl is keeping a careful watch on his players. After Kroh had pitched awhile he came in panting and all in. Stahl walked up to him and said: "Look here, my boy, the sooner you get your wind the better it will be for you. Now jog around the park three times." Which Kroh proceeded to do. At night some of the players were talking of the incident in front of the hotel. "You never know whether Stahl is fooling or means it when he tells you anything," said one of the players. "Well, I guess he meant it when he spoke to me," exclaimed Kroh.

Killian is improving fast and the last time he took his turn in the box the batters could not touch him. He has a puzzling cross-fire delivery and fields his position well.

Players Show Improvement Every Day.

Professor Green, the trainer, has his hands full these days. Nearly all the players want a rub-down after coming in from work. Green's room smells like a hospital when he is doing business.

The grounds keeper locks the gates when the players get in, so the Little Rock small boys congregate on the centre field fence and pass remarks about "beans."

Collins tipped the scales at exactly 172 pounds to-day, thereby winning a $5 bet from Freddie O'Connell, who thought he was heavier.

The skating rinks, the billiard parlors and the theatres are patronized by the boys after supper. Peterson is the champion pool player of the team. President Taylor is quite handy with the billiard cue and usually plays two games before retiring.

Stahl says he will put Railing in the box as soon as the exhibition games start and make him show something. At present the young pitcher is a puzzle to everybody. He works sparingly and spends most of his time tossing the ball against the grand stand and catching it as it comes back. He appears to have malaria, which may account for his lack of ambition.

PILGRIMS HEAR FROM GEORGE

William S. George, the Lacross, Wis., pitcher, signed by the Boston Americans, who has been among the missing for some time, has at last been heard from. Treasurer McBreen yesterday got a wire from Columbus from George, asking for transportation to Little Rock, Ark., and he immediately forwarded the funds for the same. George was signed upon the recommendation of Henry Killilea, the former owner of the Boston Americans.

HONEY MELLODY IS BACK HOME

Honey Mellody and his manager, Jack Mooney, are back from Philadelphia, where the Charlestown boxer met Joe Thomas last Wednesday night. "Honey" admits that the Californian outpointed him, but he says that the knockdown punch he got in the first round made him so blind that he couldn't see what he was doing in the next three rounds. On his arrival Mellody found a telegram from Frank Selee, the former Boston National promoter, offering him a bout with Mike Twin Sullivan at Pueblo.

HARVARD DROPS CADETS' ELEVEN

West Point has been turned down by Harvard, who has dropped the Cadets from the football schedule. Neither the manager nor assistant manager will assign any cause for the action. Probably the real reason is because the Crimson has arranged a contest with the Annapolis eleven, and cannot see its way clear to meet both in the same season.

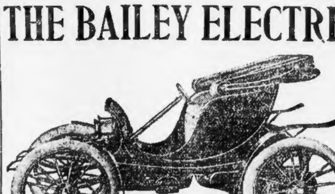

HARVARD PLAYS YALE TO-NIGHT

The Harvard and Yale basketball teams will meet to-night at New Haven. The lineup will be:

Harvard—Currie, left forward; Allen, right forward; Amberg, centre; Burnham, left guard; Brooks, right guard.

WALSH'S WIN OVER MENNEY NOT POPULAR

By Boston American Leased Wire.

LOS ANGELES, March 9.—Jimmy Walsh expected to have a cinch with Eddie Menney, but the local boxer gave the Bostonian such a stiff argument that the referee's decision in favor of Walsh was so unpopular that a riot was feared.

In almost the entire ten rounds Menney did the aggressive work. Frequently he rocked the Hub boy's head with stiff lefts to the jaw. On the other hand, Walsh did not score against his local rival very often, and when he did he didn't do any serious damage.

Walsh entered the ring an immense favorite. Odds as high as 3 to 1 were quoted against Menney. The fans were certainly surprised with the manner in which the local boy fought against his more experienced rival, and the majority of them believed that the worst decision that Menney should have been handed was a draw.

SPORTING NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

BASEBALL.

Jess Stovall, well-known pitcher and outfielder, has fallen into such a "soft snap" at Everett, Wash., that he will not return to the American Baseball Association this season. In addition to pitching for the Everett semi-professional ball team, from which he will receive a large share of the receipts, he is the proprietor of a bowling alley for which he does not have to pay rent.

Cleveland will have sixty baseball diamonds laid out in different parts of the city for young America to play on next Summer. The grounds are prepared at the city's expense under the direction of Director of Public Safety Leslie. Too many playgrounds for boys and girls cannot be provided for any community. The more playgrounds the healthier the children as they grow up.

"Few teams win two world's championships in succession, but that is the record the White Sox are going after," says Charlie Comiskey. "We had a hard battle to land at the top last year, but the prize was worth the effort, and we will be right back in the thick of the fight this year, too."

Medical experts are baffled. They have failed ignominiously to diagnose the fever that infects ball players every Spring. "I'm impatient for the fray," is the burden of the correspondence that passes between player and manager. The infected player is over-anxious to handle the bat and spear liners. He can hardly be held in restraint. This is when the fever is at its height, before the play begins to circulate regularly. It's never dangerous. The player recovers when the baseball season is advanced a month or two.

The Delehanty family may be represented by only two members on the diamond this season. Jim has joined the Browns at St. Louis and Joe expects to play with Williamsport. But Willie threatens to quit the game if he has to play with Mansfield again, while Frank has practically determined to give up the game for good and become a doctor.

BOXING.

Frank Selee wired Mellody an offer from Pueblo, Col., last night to meet Mike (Twin) Sullivan there for the welterweight championship. The fight is on if the inducements are right.

Bill Rhodes will meet Bill Papke again, this time at Davenport, Ill., probably on March 27. Peoria wants to match the men over again.

The reason Mellody did not do better against Mike "Twin" writes that he and Harry Lewis the first ten seconds of the bout. He saw three Thomases till the fifth round. Thomas had a chance to finish Honey, but he was unable to.

Sailor Burke, the Brooklyn middleweight, will probably be the first man to meet Jack Palmer on this side of the water. Manager Jack McGuigan of the National A. C. of Philadelphia is anxious to have the men meet before his club, and has made them a good offer. Burke has already accepted and McGuigan is still waiting to hear from Palmer. The men, if matched, will go six rounds at catchweights. Burke has started to do light work in Brooklyn in hope that Palmer will take on the match.

Joe Thomas was because of the punch he got in have forfeits up for another fight, but in the articles Lewis can fight Gans if he gets a chance. He says Frank Selee will hang up a purse of $4,000 for a fight with Mellody at Pueblo at the baseball park next month.

Young Donohue, who is with Sullivan in Colorado, has had an offer from Los Angeles to box in an all-star show, but will first try to get on matches with Hyland, Cyclone Thompson or Britt.

Tom McCarey of Los Angeles has wired Mike (Twin) Sullivan at Pueblo that he will match him and Mellody if Honey will accept.

There are three big shows in sight at Milwaukee. Kid Murphy and Eddie Greenwald, the coming bantam there, were matched to-day to meet before the Milwaukee Boxing Club March 15, and Johnnie Coulon of Chicago and Young Fitzgerald will clash before the Green Valley Club March 12. Negotiations are about completed for the Charlie Neary and George Memsic match later in the month.

The engagement between Mike Donovan of Rochester, N. Y., and Billy Rhodes of Kansas, which takes place in the Auditorium in Portland, Me., next Monday night, is one that should bring out a crowd. Two soldier boys will appear in the semi-final, while one of Biddeford's fighting French citizens will meet some good Portland boy in the first bout of the evening.

HARNESS HORSES.

Ira Band, Jr., 2:16¼, is certainly a terror over the snow, as the other afternoon he paced a quarter on the Bridgeport, Ct., speedway in 28¾ seconds, beating by a full second the best world's record for the distance to sleigh.

The former Massachusetts owned stallion Lord Roberts, 2:07¼, will be raced the coming season by Trainer Scott Croy.

The trotting mare Miss Whitney, 2:07½, which several years ago was owned and raced by Howland Russell in deep water and the matinees at Readville track, has been added to the broodmares at the Hudson River Stock Farm, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and will be bred to Oakland Baron, 2:09¼.

There is a bill up before the Missouri Legislature making it a felony, with a $100 fine, to drive or ride a horse wearing hopples.

James Y. Gatcomb writes from Los Angeles, Cal., that he is going to ship his string of horses about May 1 to the Neponset Stock Farm, Dedham, Mass. Among the horses he will bring East are two three-year-olds of marked promise, one by Bingen and the other by The Bondsman.

Some Eastern breeders had little faith in Peter the Great, 2:07¼, when he was standing at the Forbes Farm in Ponkapoag, Mass., but since going to Kentucky his colts have been booming up at a good rate. Ten two-year-olds by him have just been sold under the hammer in Chicago for an aggregate of $4,440.

Local breeders are counting much on the get of the stallion Alliewood, 2:09½, at the Shawsheen River Farm, Bedford, Mass. He not only is a fast trotter and horse show winner himself, but all of his foals strongly pattern after their sire in beauty and natural speed.

In Pennsylvania the horsemen are trying to have passed a law to legalize race-track betting and pool selling, modeled after the New York law. Race meets are limited to two each year of six days each, and no liquor is to be sold at any licensed track.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A "MADMAN."

J. ARMSTRONG CHANLER'S OWN STORY

THE DEATH OF NAPOLEON AT ST. HELENA.

JOHN ARMSTRONG CHANLER.

This man, who is a maniac under the laws of New York State, tells in the accompany story how he was able to throw himself into what he calls a "Napoleonic trance." While in this state he claims that he looked like the reproduction of a new painting of Napoleon on his deathbed, which is printed above. The painting is made from the death mask of Napoleon.

In a Book Written by Himself He Tells World How He Hypnotized Himself.

John Armstrong Chanler, a brother of Lieutenant-Governor Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler and cousin of the Astors, has just published a book entitled "Four Years Behind the Bars of Bloomingdale," in which he tells the story of his commitment to an insane asylum, his escape and subsequent occurrences.

In the book he bitterly arraigns New York laws, which he says make it possible for any person, no matter how sane, to be railroaded to an asylum; nor is he less sparing in his denunciation of persons who, he says, caused his incarceration in Bloomingdale.

He tells how, on Thanksgiving Eve, 1900, he escaped from the asylum after having been confined there for nearly four years.

He arrived under the assumed name of John Childe, in Philadelphia, and being practically penniless, went to Dr. J. Madison Taylor, a famous neurologist, and represented himself as the attorney of a client whose mental condition he desired to submit.

Dr. Taylor expressed willingness to accept the case, whereupon Mr. Chanler disclosed his identity, and in order to afford the doctor every opportunity for observation, repaired to a private asylum for six months.

Allenists Pronounce Him Sane.

During this period he was visited and examined by many eminent alienists; and in his book are set forth the opinions of Dr. Taylor, Dr. H. C. Wood, Professor Joseph Jastrow, Dr. William James, Professor of Psychology at Harvard, and the late Dr. Thomson Jay Hudson to the effect that they believed Mr. Chanler to be sane.

The statement of Dr. Horatio Curtis Wood is in part as follows:

"In 1893 Mr. Chanler first noticed what he calls 'premonitions,' meaning by that that after thinking over a subject over night, mapping out a course of action, he would wake up in the morning with a feeling of exhilaration, of depression or of indifference. When exhilarated he always found that his plan was judicious, and things went well; when depressed he found it always wise to modify to a greater or less degree his plan of action; indifference meant that there was going to be nothing of interest that day.

"Latter part of December, 1896, accidentally discovered that at certain times and conditions, if he would take a pencil in his hand, it would write without his making conscious effort or giving direction.

"Shortly after the development of graphic automatism Mr. Chanler found that he at times could talk in the same way, his vocal utterances being unconnected with conscious cerebration."

How He Brought on Trance.

Here is Mr. Chanler's statement as to the way in which he first passed into the condition which he terms "Napoleonic trance."

"In communicating with my X-faculty (a sub-conscious faculty) by means of vocal automatism, which is also one of my trance-like states, I was informed by my X-faculty that it would like me to go into a Napoleonic trance. It gave me to understand that I would represent the death of Napoleon Bonaparte by so doing; and that my features, when my eyes were closed, would resemble strongly those of the dead Napoleon Bonaparte. This was in February, 1897, shortly after my arrival at the Hotel K., New York city.

"My X-faculty did not tell me what to do in order to produce the so-called Napoleonic trance. It merely informed me that when the time came it would instruct me what to do to produce the trance.

"The distinguished sculptor, Mr. S. G., calling at the hotel shortly after my arrival, while I was in bed in the evening, my X-faculty gave me to understand, without Mr. S. G. knowing it, that it would be the proper time for me to enter the Napoleonic trance.

"I asked Mr. G. if he would like to see me enter a trance. I was interested myself from a scientific point of view to know just what I would do in a trance, never having entered one before. I was also interested to know if the prognostications of the X-faculty regarding my face and features strongly resembling those of Napoleon Bonaparte in death were accurate or false.

Forced Himself Into Trance.

"Mr. S. G. expressed keen interest in seeing me in a trance. I then took, under the direction of my X-faculty, a small hand mirror I used for shaving in both my hands, and, holding it rigidly, extended above my head, stared at my eyes for several moments without result.

"I did not know but that the experiment was about to prove abortive and ridiculous. It was one of the most daring experiments I ever entered for that reason.

"After a minute or two of complete passivity and rigidity, for the first time in my life I experienced the entrance to a trance. It is excessively interesting as an experience.

"The first symptoms I had of the entering therein were slow deep breaths, utterly involuntary on my part. These gradually increased in force and frequency until they resembled what I imagine are death gasps, by which I mean a man dying and gasping for breath.

"These gasps continued in frequency and force and my mouth began to distend, stretching open to its fullest extent. This continued for several minutes. I should judge ten, though I have no means of judging, simply guess. At the end of the supposed ten minutes my hands slowly placed the mirror on the bed, my eyes closed and the Napoleonic death trance so-called by my X-faculty had begun.

"Of course, I cannot judge, having my eyes shut, of the resemblance of my face and features to those of Napoleon Bonaparte in death; all I know is from the remarks of the persons who have witnessed this Napoleonic death trance. Mr. S. G. asked me to desist, said it was very affecting, that he was unaccustomed to a trance and asked me not to enter it again in his presence.

Tried Experiment Again.

"A few days later I mentioned this occurrence to Mr. S. W. and Dr. E. F. when they were both visiting me. They expressed a desire to see me under the trance. I did so under the same conditions as before Mr. S. G.

"When I entered the death trance while my eyes were closed, Mr. W. was so affected by it that he acted as though he were literally in the presence of death, whispering in a reverential tone to Dr. E. F.: 'It is exactly like Napoleon's death mask; I have the photograph of it at home.'

"I afterward asked Mr. W. if he had made that remark to Dr. E. F., and he admitted it frankly.

"These were the only occasions upon which I entered the Napoleonic death trance with one exception. The exception was in the early Summer of 1899, when, at the request of Drs. Austin Flint, Sr., and Carlos Macdonald, I entered the trance. After I had entered the trance I heard Dr. Flint say in a low tone to Dr. Macdonald: 'Come around to the side and see the profile.'

"Dr. Flint seemed somewhat affected by the trance, for, after making the above remark, he stepped hastily to the bed, and, patting me on the knee, said: 'Come out of it, come out of it; you can, can't you?'"

The names of Drs. Flint and Macdonald the referred to in this part of the book only by their initials; but on a subsequent page, when Mr. Chanler refers to the subject again, he gives their names in full.

LABOR NEWS

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS. 96

Advance notices of labor union meetings which are to be held on Sunday should reach the Labor Editor not later than Friday night to insure their insertion in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

The Building Trades section of the Central Labor Union voted last night to recommend to Mayor Fitzgerald that a practical building trades mechanic be appointed on the committee to revise the building trades laws of this city. It was reported that the Boylston Brewery and Boston Beer Company had agreed to employ hereafter none but mechanics and laborers carrying the card of the section.

Communications were received from President Kirby of the National Structural Building Trades Alliance stating that he would comply with the protest of the section not to grant a charter to four organizations of the Boston Building Trades Council. Delegates were admitted from Bricklayers' Union No. 3 and Gas Fitters, Fixture Fitters and Hangers' Union No. 175.

The board of governors was instructed to meet to-day and straighten out difficulties for the hoisting engineers, building laborers and sand and tip-cart drivers. The 1907 agreement of Elevator Constructors' Union was indorsed. The section is negotiating a year's lease of Hollis Hall, from April 1.

BUILDING TRADES COUNCIL.

Resolutions of sympathy were passed by Building Trades Council Grievance Committee last night on the death of Business Agent John J. Cashman's five-year-old son, Paul Girard. James A. Haley was instructed to act as business agent during Mr. Cashman's absence. He was instructed to endeavor to straighten out two jobs in Chelsea in the interests of the lathers and roofers. The council meets to-morrow afternoon. Officers will be nominated and elected at the meeting Sunday, March 31.

PRESSMEN'S DELEGATES.

Franklin Association No. 18 has nominated the following for delegates to the International Printing Pressmen's Union convention to be held at New York in June: Thomas Rasmussen, Daniel J. McDonald, John P. Sweeney, Lewis Lewenberg, Stephen A. Walsh, Michael H. O'Connor, Joseph A. Dart, Daniel O'Hara, Henry D. Ross and Michael S. Cooney. Five will be selected from this number at the April meeting.

MEDFORD C. L. U. ELECTS.

The Medford Central Labor Union has elected the following officers: President, Charles Black; vice-president, James B. Hughes; secretary, Lawrence E. Fitzpatrick; treasurer, John G. Scannell; sergeant-at-arms, William F. Fitzgerald; trustees, Thomas L. Spillane, Edward Lahy and Adolphus Griffin.

LABOR NOTES.

Plumbers' Union No. 22 reported last night that the building department had two non-union men suspended from work on remodelling the Hotel Lexington yesterday because they were working without a license. The strike of building crafts on the building is still on.

Fighting the Piano Trust

The name "Piano Trust" sounds big, looks powerful and frightens a good many small piano dealers. They wouldn't dare to cut the price on a "Piano Trust" instrument. We have been cutting their prices for months—cutting—slashing—and actually slaughtering their prices, and have been whipping the Big Piano Trust representatives in every N. E. State. We confess that we are making no money doing it, but we are still in the ring and selling almost any make of high-grade pianos, new or second-hand, at prices that make the big Piano Trust sick.

Shaw Is a Banker, Cortelyou Is United States Treasurer

Mr. Shaw Is Now Reaping His Reward. Cortelyou Will Get His Later

A gentleman named Leslie M. Shaw was the public official in charge of the treasury of the United States.

You who read this column remember our prediction was made WHEN HE SENT TENS OF MILLIONS OF PUBLIC MONEY INTO WALL STREET TO HELP THE SPECULATORS THERE GO AHEAD WITH THEIR GAME.

In Wall street, the gamblers run short of money every little while. They like the government to send down a great deal, that the cheerful game may go on with the liberal supply of financial "chips."

We ventured to predict that when Mr. Shaw should end his work for the government at eight thousand dollars a year salary, he would get something better in Wall street.

He has got it.

This week, quietly and modestly, he enters upon his duty as PRESIDENT OF THE CARNEGIE TRUST COMPANY.

Mr. Shaw is a pleasant gentleman. We don't question in the least that he always did the things he thought were right. The trouble is, that we select for our Treasurer of the United States gentlemen who think it is right TO USE THE GOVERNMENT MONEY TO HELP ALONG THE WALL STREET GAMBLERS, AND WHO DON'T TAKE THE SLIGHTEST INTEREST IN OTHER PARTS OF THE COUNTRY OR OF THE POPULATION. Wall street is always grateful to such gentlemen, and it finds good jobs for them, as we see daily.

Mr. Cortelyou, formerly collecting agent for the Republican party, the gentleman who got all that money for Mr. Roosevelt's campaign fund in 1904, including THE QUARTER OF A MILLION EXTRA THAT MR. HARRIMAN RAISED, is now made Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. Cortelyou, as Secretary of the Treasury, will be in a position to DO SPECIAL FAVORS FOR THE CORPORATIONS THAT GAVE HIM CAMPAIGN MONEY WHEN HE ASKED FOR IT. And when he gets through as Secretary of the Treasury, WORKING, OF COURSE, ENTIRELY IN ACCORDANCE WITH HIS OWN CONSCIENCE, the people in Wall street will be ready to recognize his services, as they have recognized those of Mr. Shaw.

Won't it be nice, if the time ever comes, when our Secretaries of the Treasury, and our other officials, TAKE AN INTEREST IN THE PEOPLE THAT PAY THEM THEIR SALARIES—in the farmers out in the West, the little business men here in the East and all the others that struggle, but whom nobody thinks of helping with United States cash!

All the help is reserved for Wall street gamblers. They can get fifty millions from the Treasury dumped into their game whenever they yell for it.

How long is this going to keep up?

A Queer Motto for a Suicide Club

One Part of It Ought to Be Left Out

The Salvation Army has organized a bureau to convince would-be suicides that they ought not to kill themselves.

It is not a bad idea, although the work that the Army does in helping people to HELP themselves, thus keeping them OUT of the suicide idea, is far better.

While praising the genius and activity of the Salvation Army it is necessary to criticise the motto of this anti-suicide organization.

It reads:

"Talk sunshine, cheer up, and LET OTHERS WORRY."

The last part of the motto should be cut out. The Salvation Army, being a Christian organization, must be familiar with the fact that the fundamental idea of the Christian doctrine is NOT to "let others worry."

If there were not so much tendency in the world to "let others worry," there wouldn't be any necessity for a club to prevent suicide.

If the human race were not already too well supplied with the capacity for letting others worry, and not caring about them, we should be about a million years farther on than we are now.

The habit of "letting others worry" really is a step on the road to the suicidal frame of mind.

Salvationists should say to the would-be suicide: "Forget yourself, devote your energies to trying to cure some poor creature near you of worry."

This would be more apt to take the suicide notion out of a man than would advising him to think only of himself, and to let others carry their own worries.

This idea is respectfully submitted to the intelligent and philanthropic managers of the Salvation Army Suicide Bureau.

Legitimate Trade

By James J. Montague

I NEVER poked fun at a gatling gun
In the frenzy of furious strife,
Or soared toward the moon in a motor balloon
At the imminent risk of my life;
But the men who above all the thunder of war,
Or who travel the air unafraid,
Are untutored strangers to most of the dangers
In the line of legitimate trade.

THE brokers on the Stock Exchange who want to buy or sell
Come at you with a rolling eye and blood-congealing yell,
To make you yield a half a point they'll claw away your coat,
Or yank your teeth and hair out while they clutch you by the throat.
Of course it's merely business, but there never was a fray
Where brother battered brother in the Wall Street way.

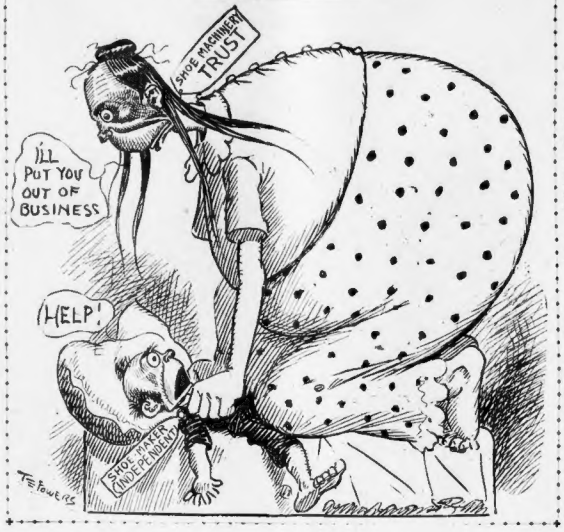

I NEVER should choose giant powder to use
As a fuel to keep the house dry,
Or seek to assuage a tiger's rude rage
By looking him straight in the eye;
But men who would do both these things and say, "Tools!
It's a cinch!" would turn pallid if made
To take their own chances in rough-house lessons
In the line of legitimate trade.

FOR there were no wilder Indians on the wildest Western range
Than the howling, hooting gentlemen down on the Stock Exchange.
The way they get the day's work done would turn a cowboy pale,
And cause the bandit to give up an echoing, envious wail.
Of course it all is business, but a pirate chief would pray
To get rich more politely than the Wall Street way.

She Tells Young Wives How to Win Back the Love of the Husband Who Is Growing Indifferent to Her

THIS is the query: "Just what course should a young wife pursue who believes that her husband, whom she adores, is growing indifferent to her?"

Sit down alone by yourself in a quiet room and relax every muscle and take fifty deep inhalations of fresh air, slowly exhaling your breath, until you feel calm and are able to think clearly and without prejudice. The deep breaths will assist you to do this.

Then study yourself carefully as you would study another person, and try and see wherein you may have failed to be attractive.

Remember a wife is a three-fold being and must attract from three sources (as must the husband), yet wives are usually less exacting in these requirements than husbands. However we may declare that a man should be as liberal and lenient as a woman toward the loved one, we must face the fact that he rarely is and accept the situation which nevertheless to have made inevitable and reason accordingly.

A husband may "drop off" in personal appearance and grow a little neglectful in dress without losing the sentiment of affection in the heart of his wife. Indeed, when he seems to be prematurely aging from any cause she often loves him the more, with that maternal affection which is frequently added to wifely devotion.

But man's nature is such that paternal love rarely supplements the lover's passion when his wife begins to fade.

Therefore it should behoove woman to study herself from a scientific and hygienic standpoint and make a business of retaining her health and her beauty.

Cultivate Neatness

WITH proper attention given to physical exercise, the care of the complexion, sensible diet and right thinking, a woman may grow in beauty and personal attraction with every year, at least until she reaches the half-century mark; and we have examples of women who have gone on far beyond that time even, and at sixty rivalled younger belles in their powers to charm eye, ear and heart.

With every year after twenty-four a woman should be more and more careful in the study of what is becoming to her in apparel, and should take greater pains to be always well groomed and neat in her attire.

Not by gay or gaudy garments should she attempt to disguise the passing of time, nor by extravagance, but by appropriate and becoming apparel, which requires less money than flaunting and haste.

If you, madame, realize that by your self-indulgence or your self-neglect you have grown coarse in face or figure, or worn and commonplace in appearance, set about repairing the damage.

Learn to Think

CONTROL your appetite, study physical culture, learn how to breathe, walk, sit and sleep, and, most important of all, how to think, and in a few months or in a few weeks you will begin to regain what you have lost, besides finding less time to grow morbid over your troubles.

Then, if you have any kind of talent, or even a taste for any special art or line of study, begin and cultivate it. Much can be accomplished in this direction with no outlay of money if you are determined, and if the determination becomes a settled purpose money will come when you need it to pursue your study.

Mock Tact Required

THIS requires much tact, poise and balance, but it is the woman whom all men admire to whom a man usually remains faithful. There is not one man in ten thousand who has the gratitude and loyalty to appreciate the woman who shuts all other men utterly out of her horizon for his sake.

Therefore, it is wise for you to keep alive a certain discreet association with the opposite sex and to let your husband see that men find you attractive and entertaining, but do not go out of your way to remind him of the fact. He will observe it for himself, rest assured.

Consider his tastes and guard his interests and protect his honor. Never discuss his faults with any one but himself.

Be agreeable and entertaining, and make him realize that no more tactful and charming woman is to be found outside of his home.

Yet let him see that you are able to entertain yourself and to attract entertaining people to your side when he is inconsiderate.

Nothing arrests a man's attention sooner than this fact—that a woman is getting on very well without him. It hurts his vanity and his pride, and he is far more liable to return to his allegiance than if she sulks and mopes and accuses him of neglect.

Practice Self-Control

BE careful to control yourself when you feel anger and jealousy taking possession of your mind. Remember how unbecoming such moods are and how unlikely to win back a failing interest.

Go out for a walk, or practice your music, or take a half hour's exercise at deep breathing and physical culture until you have command of yourself.

In serenity lies power.

If you think there is any one respectable woman who has especially interested your husband, cultivate her acquaintance and invite her to the house and let him see much of her.

In propinquity lies disenchantment.

If after a thorough and systematic course of this treatment your husband continues to grow indifferent, you will of course realize that you drew a moral blank in the lottery of marriage. But you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you have made every effort to awaken the best in his nature, while you have cultivated the best in yourself.

And there will be a certain happiness in the consciousness that you have grown in physical, mental and spiritual power through your trouble.

Don't forget that heaven, like charity, begins at home, or that it takes two to make a paradise, while one can make a hell.—ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.
